TRAVELLING BY TRAIN IN CANADA? NEW COVID-19 RESTRICTIONS IN EFFECT

In order to manage the spread of COVID-19, the Government of Canada has new restrictions in place for federally-regulated intercity passenger rail travel in Canada.

NO traveller, who is symptomatic of COVID-19 will be allowed to board a train.

Health Check consists of a few questions and visual observation.

- Intercity passenger rail carriers designated by order by the Minister of Transport are required to do a health check of all passengers before they board a train.
- The health check requires railway company representatives asking simple health questions, looking for visible signs of illness prior to boarding, and recommending the passenger follow guidance from local health authorities.
- A company is required to deny boarding in the event the passenger presents COVID-19 symptoms, unless the person provides a medical certificate certifying that the symptoms are not related to COVID-19.
- A company is also required to deny boarding if the person has been denied boarding by a company or any other carrier in the past 14 days due to a medical reason related to the COVID-19, or if the person is the subject of a provincial or local public health order.

Important: No person should provide answers to the health check or questions in a way that they know to be false or misleading.
